City of Seneca Welcomes New Director of Planning & Development

Xavier Bauguess feels, in a small way, that he is coming “home” when he decided to leave Midland, Texas, and head back to upstate SC to lead the City of Seneca’s Planning and Development department. “Home,” because he spent all five years of his academic career at nearby Clemson University, and “home” because he genuinely likes the feel and vibe of a small town, especially one that is actively engaged in planning for its future.

Bauguess left his job as Planning Manager with the City of Midland, Texas, to accept the position of Director of Planning for the City of Seneca, a position that had been held for 22 years by Ed Halbig. Bauguess says he is very pleased to be in a small town environment that still remains true to its small town roots and values.

Bauguess holds his Masters degree in Public Administration from Clemson University, and enjoys most outdoor sports, attending and watching collegiate sports, but especially enjoys watching his personal favorites, the Clemson Tigers. He is a native of Statesville, North Carolina, where his family still resides.
